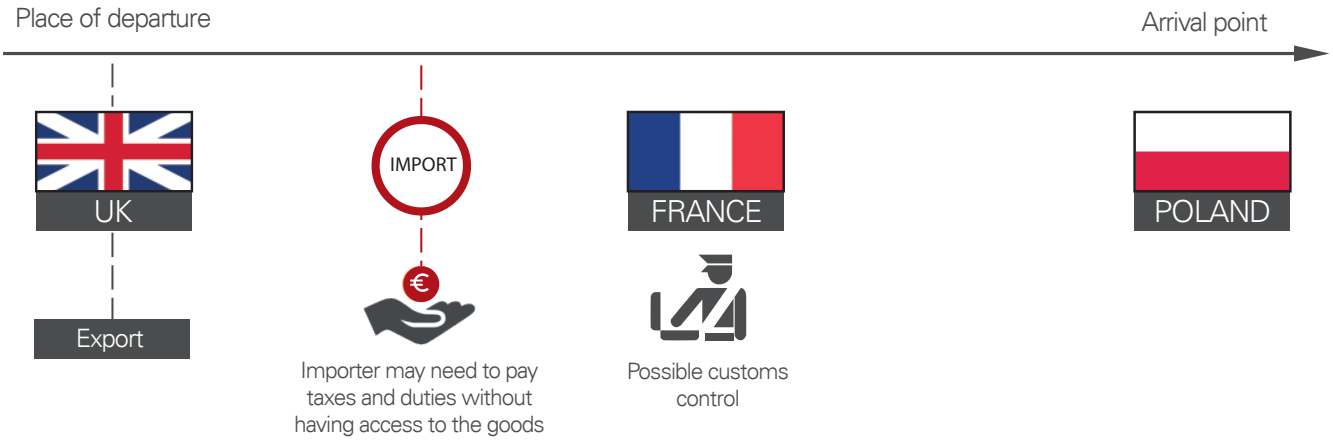
Why Customs transit? The Brexit example

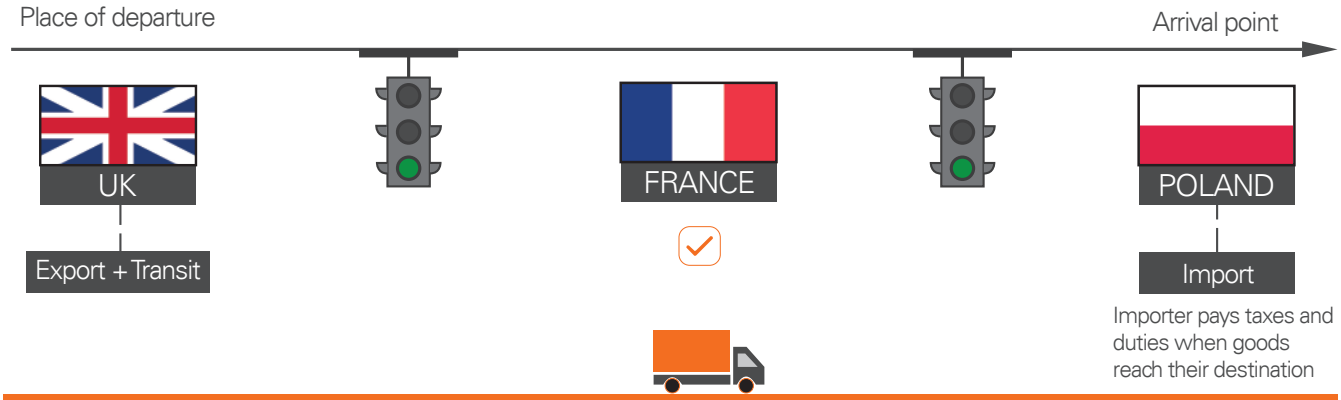
Without Transit

Trucks, semi-trailers, containers and vans travelling from the UK to continental EU and beyond, for example to Poland, will need to have their Export Procedure performed before they arrive at their British port of exit, whilst the Import procedure should be performed and completed before the truck arrives at an EU entry port. This usually involves paying duties and taxes before the goods have arrived at the EU entry port and a long time before the goods actually arrive at their destination. The truck may also be called for customs control by the customs at the port of entry to the EU.



With Transit

Trucks, semi-trailers, containers and vans travelling from the UK to continental EU and beyond, for example to Poland, will travel freely through the entry point of the EU to their destination in Poland with the need for Import procedure and payment of taxes and duties moved from the entrance point of the EU to the destination in Poland.



Movement of goods under transit - suspension of customs duties

TransitNet - the solution for BREXIT

Brexit will result in massive changes for all companies which currently import, export, trade with or transport goods from and to the UK. Up to now there has been no need for customs declarations for trade between the UK and the majority of continental Europe. Post Brexit, all of these shipments will require a customs declaration. In a Brexit context, as illustrated above, customs transit gives companies the possibility to move the clearance of their shipments away from an exit and entry point of the EU/UK to a location closer to the destination of their goods, removing the need to perform import procedures before the goods have even arrived in the EU/UK.

The world of customs services can be complicated and frustrating. SGS TransitNet takes the complexity and the frustration away from their clients offering them a single window system to complete customs procedures including;

- Full package of export and transit documents for export from the UK to the EU and beyond
- Transit documents starting from 23 NCTS countries for inbound (Import) to the UK
